☆ Success Story ☆

I had two retained baby teeth - one on each side of my lower teeth, directly across from each other. After having been filled and refilled numerous times over the years, it finally became necessary to do something about them. It was necessary that I first get braces because the teeth in back of them were leaning over onto them and they couldn't be easily extracted. I had the option of having them replaced with either bridges or implants. Since two of the four teeth that would have been ground down to accommodate bridges were "perfect" with no fillings, I preferred to go the implant route. I've been very happy with the results. It is nice to have two full sized teeth that can actually participate in chewing! They look great and they're functional!
